Did You Notice?

Font
The font color doesn’t contrast with the background color, so it’s hard to read. Also, the font size of the heading and content is too small; there’s no way the person in the back row will be able to make out the words.

Background
The background grid design is too busy, and the background color is too light to contrast with the text.

Text
There is way too much text for one slide. Each slide should only have one main point. Try to follow the 6 by 4 | 4 by 6 rule of thumb: no more than six lines with four words or four lines with six words. Keep the total word count per slide under 20-25 words. Lastly, the information is a paragraph and not a list, so a single bullet point is inappropriate.

Graphic
The clip art graphic is poor quality and hard to make out; it’s also completely covering the text behind it. Most important, it does not have anything to do with the information presented; thus, it serves no purpose and detracts from the message.
